

Dear Parents, Teachers, and PEAKers,

I hope everyone feels refreshed and rejuvenated after an amazing Spring Break! We're gearing up to head into the final push for the students' Independent Study projects.

Students will each be gathering and printing three pictures that help them "tell the story" for their independent study presentations. We'll be carefully selecting images that have specific purposes within the project, are of a suitable resolution, and will be citing the sources for each.

We'll also be working further on the students' creative portion of the presentations, again with the help of professional artist Katie Knight. Ms. Knight will guide them in a new and fascinating process combining salt and watercolor (perfect materials for ocean art!) and these will become the background images for the cyanotypes the students created in March, which are amazing! We can't wait for you to see these unique pieces.

Lastly, students will begin putting all the pieces together to prepare for presenting to a college audience at MSU on April 23.

Please watch your email for details about our upcoming trip to MSU on April 23! We'll be working with various professors and MSU students, and our students will get to present their Independent Study presentations to MSU education students for critique and feedback.
