Indirect Commands

An indirect command is the act of reporting, referring to, or in some fashion talking about a command rather than stating the actual command which is called a direct command.

An indirect command is set off by a verb of commanding, followed by the indirect command, “ut” + subjunctive verb.

Direct Command: “Hand over the money, merchant”, ordered the brigands.
“pecūniam trāde, mercātor”, imperāvērunt latrōnēs.

Indirect Command: The brigands ordered the merchant to hand over the money.

latrōnēs mercātōrī imperāvērunt ut pecūniam trāderet.

verb of commanding,    ut    subjunctive verb.

Result Clauses

A result clause is a subordinate clause which expresses the actual or likely result of some action, situation or condition.

A result clause is set off by certain adjectives, adverbs, or phrases in the main clause which act as signal words that a result clause will follow.

Signal Words

tantus, tanta, tantum – so great

ita – so

talis, talis, tale – of such a kind

totiēns – so often

tot – so many

sīc – thus

adeō – to such an extent

eius modi – of such a sort

tam – so

1. tantī erant clāmōrēs mīlītis ut tōta castra complērent.

The shouts of the soldier were so great that they filled the entire camp.

2. tam fortiter et totiēns inīmicōs petīvit mīlēs ut lēgātus prae cēterīs mīlītibus eum laudāret.
